Background

Access requests for health records can be made by patients wishing to view their own records, or by an individual acting on the authority of the patient (for example, by written authorisation exercising parental rights or court appointment).

The patient's personal representative or someone with a claim arising from the death of the patient can make applications for access to a deceased person's health records.

Applications for requests to health records should be made to the organisation holding the relevant records (named in this leaflet as the Record Holder). For example, this could be your hospital, general practitioner (GP) or private health care provider.

The application form for access to health records held by Wrightington, Wigan and Leigh NHS Foundation Trust is at the end of this leaflet.

Rights

The Data Protection Act 2018 governs the request for the public to have access to their health records. This Act gives certain rights of access, but the Record Holder is entitled to withhold information considered to be detrimental to the physical or mental health of the patient or other person, or if it contains information given by a third party. The Record Holder does not have to disclose the fact that the information has been withheld.

You can ask for corrections to the records, and you are entitled to a copy of the correction, or, if the record is not corrected, you are entitled to a copy of the Record Holder's note of the request and any discussion regarding this.

The Trust must respond to your application within one calendar month, however if a request is deemed to be complex this is extended by a further two calendar months. Complex requests are those which involve the retrieval, interrogation, and electronic capture of any paper records.

Receiving or Accessing the Records

Records will be sent out to you in a password encrypted document on a CD. The password to open this document will be emailed to you. If you would prefer to view the records, please indicate this by ticking the box on the application form below.
